AUNT SAYS DANCE ESCORT KILLED GIRL

FRENZIED BY REBUFF IS THEORY

Hunt for the slayer of Maybelle Matheson in the Baker street tragedy turned into a new path today, when police were told of two strangers—men who got off a Providence bus in West Roxbury last Friday and inquired the way to No. 335 Baker street.

That address was the home of the murdered girl, almost within sight of which she was slain.

Fear of revenge at the hands of jealous girls, that Miss Matheson wrote home about a few days before she was murdered, was the subject of questioning of her aunt today by Captain James P. Smith and Inspector Harry Pierce.

She revealed that she had warned Maybelle repeatedly of the danger that lay in the girl's ready acceptance of invitations to ride from men who owned automobiles.

Robert McKay of Dedham, a let.

BASEBALL STARS ARE CLEARED

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker today were cleared of all charges, which might make them ineligible for participation in professional baseball in a decision by Kansas M. Landis.

They were given permission to resume their withdrawal from baseball and return to the reserve lists of the Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians.

The commissioner's decision also cleared Joe Wood, outfielder for Cleveland during 1916 and at present baseball coach at Yale University.

Wood was named by Leonard as one of the Indian players deeply interested in the alleged "fixing" of the game in question, played between Cleveland and Detroit on Sept. 25, 1912.

They were exonerated by Commissioner Landis of any wrongdoing in Please Turn to Page 17, Column 2.

MELLON ENDS LAWLESS ACTS OF DRY AGENTS

Washington, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Resisting opposition to illegal practices in prohibition "undercover" work, Secretary Mellon said today that enforcement agents in the future must more closely observe the treasury's policy on the subject.

Specifically, the secretary made it clear that incidents such as that involved in the Bridge Wharf Club at New York, which was used by government agents in gathering information of rum-running, and the practice of Federal officers engaging in rum-trafficking from Canada for the same purpose, would not be permitted.

with the legal use of "undercover" workers, believing it necessary to employ such men to break up the larger conspiracies in the liquor trade. But, he said, when informed that they were oversteering the bounds of the law in their zeal, he called a halt.

He disclosed that government agents in a number of cases had proposed wire tapping among other illegal plans, but that their program had been stopped. One officer had been discharged for wire tapping, he said.

ENWRIGHT SAYS: 'I GAVE CURLEY HAIRCUT PRICE'

Frederick W. Enwright, publisher of the suspended Boston Telegraph, took the stand in his own defense in Superior Court today, and declared that he used to loan ex-Mayor James M. Curley money when Curley complained that he was "down and out."

He started by giving Curley $2 for a haircut and shave, Enwright claimed.

The latter is on trial before a jury, charged with criminally libeling the former mayor in the Telegraph columns.

A surprise was caused in the trial when Curley did not take the stand. The publisher went on as first defense witness after the government rested.

"I have known Mr. Curley about fifteen years," Enwright testified. "After Enwright had started the Telegraph (then the Telegram) in March, 1911, Curley called on him frequently, the publisher said, told him he was a candidate for Mayor and asked the paper's support."

"He told me a number of times that he was down and out," Enwright claimed on the stand. "I gave him money on two or three occasions."

"The first time it was a very small amount—$2. He needed it for a haircut and a shave. He told me that he was borrowing 25 cents or so to come into Boston."

"He told me he lived in the

'PEACHES' BOY FRIENDS RUSH TO HER RESCUE

New York, Jan. 27 (U.N.I.).—The boy friends of "Peaches" Brownling, the youths whose names she deleted from her diary so they would not be "dragged into the case," today rallied to her defense as her millionaire "Daddy" threatened to reveal incidents of her premarital life when his separation suit reopened Monday.

Five of these youths were named in the first issue of "Peaches' love diary." The pages are now in the hands of her attorney, and will be turned to court. Almost those named, it has been learned, are the sons of a Supreme Court judge, a clerk, and a divorcee. They have not been subpoenaed.

But said today they were ready to mount the witness stand in "Peaches' defense."

SAYS SHE WAS FOOLISH.
"It was a foolish thing to change the diary," the child wife said, "but I didn't want to drag those boys in. My diary was just the kind any foolish flapper would keep. It was filled with the sentimental ravings of a silly girl. I admit, I know I referred to some of those boys as 'some lovers,' but I never even went out alone to them. And I always read the diary to my mother."

Browning, in his office today, vehemently denied he would enter.

STRICTER AUTO TESTS TO BAR 'SPEED FIENDS'

To eliminate reckless drivers, or "persons with very evident dangerous human traits" from the highway, greater care in the examination of applicants for motor licenses is urged in a report made public today by the permanent committee on street and highway safety recently appointed by Governor Fuller.

Police chiefs, answering a questionnaire on the outstanding causes of accidents, listed "speed, inattention, bad driving, poor brakes, drunken driving, glaring headlights and lack of intelligence on the part of pedestrians in streets where there is continuous motor traffic." The Governor is asked to add five members to the general committee to work out a plan to have a regional committee in each county for the purpose of stimulating local activities.

LINER BRINGS PHEASANTS

With 275 English pheasants and other miscellaneous cargo the Atlantic transport motorship Manuel docked at Pier 3, East Boston, today, appearing as a crystal ship with her colorful livery.

The pheasants are consigned to the Massachusetts division of fisheries and game for allotment to the State reserves at Marshfield and Wilmam.

According to Lyndon B. Sherman, superintendent of the Marshfield Farm, the birds will breed sufficiently to furnish hunters plenty of fresh stock when the season opens.

Captain J. T. J. Wille reported heavy westerly gales for five days.

WALTHAM GIRL SUES REALTOR FOR $20,000

A bill in equity brought by Kitty E. Fitzsimmons of Waltham against Louis K. Ziman of Boston to reach and apply the interest of Ziman in the Ziman Realty Trust in equity any judgment she may obtain in her suit for $20,000 against Ziman for his breach of promise to marry her, reveals that the defendant had a wife and family at the time Miss Fitzsimmons says he agreed to marry her.

Judge Morton of the Superior court has ordered a special process of attachment for $20,000 to be made on the real estate on the Ziman Realty Trust, and funds supposed to belong to Ziman in the Union Market, National Bank of Waltham.

Miss Fitzsimmons says that in February, 1923, she was employed by Ziman as head waitress at Vernon Court, Boston, in which she was assigned a sleeping room. While there she said Ziman made advances to her. She said Ziman told her he had a wife and family living in Fall River, but that he was legally separated from his wife and would marry her (Miss Fitzsimmons).

HOOD SLASHER GETS YEAR

Asserting that he was inclined to "disbelieve" the testimony of the defense, Judge Joseph Donovan imposed a sentence of a year in the House of Correction on Vernon Deland, a brother of the defendant, in connection with the slaying of Thurston J. Hood, Harvard instructor, in Cambridge.

Professor Hood appeared in East Cambridge Court this morning, a long, thin, dark man with a light complexion, bearing evidence of the nature of the slaying.

Deland, defense witness testified, on the day of the attack, he reached for his knife, intending to strike hands with Professor Hood, but the latter fell against his knife.

MAID PICTURES BOINAY IN PINK KIMONA

A verbal picture of Joseph V. Boinay, the Lexington automobile dealer, gazed in her pink kimono, and carrying her from the dining room to her bedroom where he defused her with kisses, was painted by Miss Daisy J. Turner, colored Lexington newspaper painter in Middlesex Superior Court today. Miss Turner is seeking alleged damages aggregating $15,500 from Boinay, the principal count being incest.

Miss Turner made no mention of the standing of the mercury in the thermometer on New Year's Eve in 1917 in describing the pink kimono incident, stated in the Brookline notes in which she was employed. The family was not at home and she forced Boinay to sit down to a table loaded with food.

FOUGHT OFF KISS

"I am not hungry—I am hungry only for you," she testified that Boinay replied.

"He asked me why I was so cool," she testified, "why I tried to fight him when he kissed me."

"Then he did kiss me, and picked me up in his arms and carried me from the dining room."

Then the witness declared, Boinay kissed and embraced her, and straddled himself in her pink kimono. Boinay also told her if the people who owned the house happened to come in he would do the talking, she declared.

Miss Turner told the court she had kept her resentment with Boinay a secret, except to Frank Boinay, a brother of the defendant, and another woman. She also said she did not know Boinay was keeping company with the woman from his pockets while possessing his wife.

GAVE HER LOCKET

In 1916, Miss Turner testified, Boinay gave her a locket. She gave him a pair of cuff links.

"I asked him for a lock of his hair at the time," she testified, "He cut off a lock and gave it to me."

During February, 1924, Miss Turner testified, she told Boinay she had asked a clerkman to marry her immediately, and they both agreed not to reveal the date of the wedding. The next month, she testified, she informed Boinay if he wouldn't marry her, she would ask to be friends. Boinay, it was testified, refused to let her go. Finally, according to the witness, he told her to get out and she did.

FORTY YEARS OLD

In response to cross-examination by Daniel J. O'Connell, counsel for Boinay, Miss Turner declared she was 40 years old and was always known by her present name.

O'Connell produced a document purported to be a birth certificate from Grafton, Vt. Miss Turner's birth record, and read to the court the birth record of Jesse Turner, who was born in 1887. Miss Turner admitted it bore the names of her father and mother and promised to explain the difference in names.

"When I was young, neighbors used to come to the house to see my folks," Miss Turner testified. "They often said I was a little daisy and that's how they started to call me Daisy."

Miss Turner admitted under cross-examination that she had photographs of other men, but denied having had a romantic relationship with any one since she went to Boinay's house.

Attorney O'Connell read to the court a record from a Connecticut court in which it was said Boinay had been acquitted on a charge that he was the father of Miss Turner's child.

'DADDY' ASSEMBLES SNAPPY TESTIMONY TO COMBAT 'PEACHES'

COUNSEL PROMISES PLAIN OF 'DIRT' NEXT MONDAY

tain any thought of a settlement. A picture of his bride hung over his desk as he talked.

"I've been stung," he said, "but I've learned something."

Not to be outdone by Peaches, "Daddy" Browning, the big, graying man himself, is going on the witness stand next week when the Browning separation case is resumed at White Plains, and he promises to tell "Plenty."

In the words of one of his lawyers, "he's going to put the ax on the other foot—meaning that all kinds of stuff is to be done at the bureau Peaches."

There are many who think the Boston might well be spared the long days as Peaches.

The New York Society for the Prevention of Vice, for one, wants to stamp the lid down on the whole show. They have registered a protest to the judge, but it hasn't done any good.

"Peaches" alleged love affair with boys before she married the elderly millionaire are to be the main part of Daddy.

Also, Daddy's attorneys will not witness on the stand, it is hinted, who will try to show that Peaches wasn't such a good girl when she married Browning, although Peaches herself has shouted from the stand that she "certainly was."

It was reported today that the one witness Peaches' side has yet to put on the stand will be a distinguished scientist, who is said to have made a study of Daddy and reached the conclusion he is suffering from "mental fatigue."

"Peaches" herself was expected to go, mentally and physically.

"Could this trial be resumed on Monday," she said, "I'm just going to sleep and sleep—I'm all tired out."

Her attorney, Henry Follen, said "Sweetly" realizes now that she is no gold digger.

The important feature of the dispute between "Daddy" and "Peaches"—the determination of how much money the millionaire real estate operator possesses and therefore how much money he may be expected to pay, if any—has been put off by consent of counsel for both sides until after the trial is concluded.

Riches are not everything, "Peaches" said today, and if she ever marries again it's going to be to somebody who isn't overwhelmed with any trouble-making doubts.

What Makes "True Love"

"From my bitter experience with Mr. Browning I have discovered that greed, jealousy and distrust destroy love," said Peaches. "Other things that hurt are money and lust for exploitation, two of Mr. Browning's pet passions."

"I want others who would go blindly and hastily into love to put to rest their tempers. Here it is to be dreaded most of all. This was one of Mr. Browning's most outstanding traits."

"He suffered from an uncontrollable temper, which threw me into great fright. One false word and another. I believe Mr. Browning's nature seemed more dominated by greed than by the kindness he so often boasted of."

"If I ever love again I shall look for happiness in poverty, rather than riches, and in modesty rather than boastfulness. Honestly, self-sacrifice, faith and tolerance are the qualities which prove one capable of true love."

When Peaches was asked how she acquired such poles on the witness stand she replied that it was the result of not dwelling on the equanimity that confronted her.

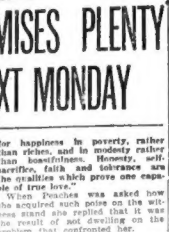

Like Happy Endings

She said: "Books, songs and associates form the nucleus of happiness and peace. After the hard days in court, I went home and found relief in reading. Books are the greatest consolation to me and kill many a dull hour."

"My favorite books are 'Arabian Nights,' Hans Christian Andersen's tales, 'Lorna Doone,' 'David Copperfield,' and 'Polaris.' You see, I don't read about adventures, books that tell of domestic mishaps and have unhappy endings."

"I use the same rule for books that I do for friends. I try to find out something about them first."

William isn't so bad for a young bony fellow, she said.

HENRY FOLLEN.

Some of the witnesses will be used to refute the snappy things Peaches said about Daddy while she was telling of her domestic upsets on the stand.

Did you ever appear before a man in the nude prior to your marriage to him? Peaches said she had.

Our legal pulling and hauling here of the nation, came to a halt until Monday.

The pause is not, as you might suspect, to give the sanitary authorities of this pleasant Westchester county town a chance to fumigate the premises. It is to give "Daddy" Browning's attorneys time to marshal testimony to refute the many, many things that "Peaches" said about the great, big, graying man.

Also what some of "Peaches'" witnesses said about him, which was plenty. There was one witness for instance, a Miss Marion Tussey, of New York, one of "Peaches'" friends, who testified that as late as last Saturday "Daddy" came snooping around her house asking her if she hadn't taken "Peaches" to some parties, and hadn't clapped on side parties, and hadn't clapped on side parties, and hadn't clapped on side parties.

All this before "Peaches" made a statement to "Daddy" you understand. Miss Tussey said that "Daddy" she hadn't done anything of the sort, wherefore, so she testified, "Daddy" remarked that it would be worth her while if she could think up something to that effect, and would get her a lot of publicity. It probably would.

Miss Tussey is a young woman whose she made against him was in reference to his relations with ten-year-old Dorothy "Sunshine" Browning, his adopted daughter.

Shields "Boy Friends"

I gathered from a statement made by John E. Mack, of counsel for "Daddy," that he expects to produce some snappy testimony on behalf of his client. The folks have been somewhat disappointed so far. The testimony has continued on Page 2.

HENRY FOLLEN.

Some of the witnesses will be used to refute the snappy things Peaches said about Daddy while she was telling of her domestic upsets on the stand.

Did you ever appear before a man in the nude prior to your marriage to him? Peaches said she had.

Our legal pulling and hauling here of the nation, came to a halt until Monday.

The pause is not, as you might suspect, to give the sanitary authorities of this pleasant Westchester county town a chance to fumigate the premises. It is to give "Daddy" Browning's attorneys time to marshal testimony to refute the many, many things that "Peaches" said about the great, big, graying man.

Also what some of "Peaches'" witnesses said about him, which was plenty. There was one witness for instance, a Miss Marion Tussey, of New York, one of "Peaches'" friends, who testified that as late as last Saturday "Daddy" came snooping around her house asking her if she hadn't taken "Peaches" to some parties, and hadn't clapped on side parties, and hadn't clapped on side parties, and hadn't clapped on side parties.

All this before "Peaches" made a statement to "Daddy" you understand. Miss Tussey said that "Daddy" she hadn't done anything of the sort, wherefore, so she testified, "Daddy" remarked that it would be worth her while if she could think up something to that effect, and would get her a lot of publicity. It probably would.

Miss Tussey is a young woman whose she made against him was in reference to his relations with ten-year-old Dorothy "Sunshine" Browning, his adopted daughter.

I gathered from a statement made by John E. Mack, of counsel for "Daddy," that he expects to produce some snappy testimony on behalf of his client. The folks have been somewhat disappointed so far. The testimony has continued on Page 2.

"Daddy's Day" Will Be Snappy, Says Runyon

By DAMON RUNYON

Universal Service Correspondent Copyright, 1927, by Universal Service White Plains, Jan. 27—"We want to keep out the dirt, but they snarl it. Now let them watch out. It furnishes some real dirt."

In such fashion does John L. Mack, chief Browning counsel, pave the way for the attack on "Peaches" Browning, runaway "Cinderella" bride, that will unfold on the removal of the sensational separation suit Monday.

This attack apparently will hinge on the neutral pursuit of the girl before she became a bride. This has been indicated by Mack's circumstantial question during his cross-examination of "Peaches."

Did you ever appear before a man in the nude prior to your marriage to him? Peaches said she had.

Our legal pulling and hauling here of the nation, came to a halt until Monday.

MOTHER-IN-LAW SAYS SHE TRIED TO KEEP COUPLE UNITED

ADVISED 'PEACHES' TO GO BACK, HER MOTHER SAYS

"Peaches" confessed to a little through her attorney, the abashed Henry Epstein. He got up and told Judge Seeger, in a soft, low voice that Tuesday evening after leaving the court house, "Peaches" had sent for the doctor and told him that the red burg diary she produced in court as a diary she had kept before her marriage was not the original manuscript.

Mr. Epstein seemed pained as he mentioned this circumstance. He said he asked her if she had the original diary, and she admitted she had. Then he told "Peaches" to produce it in court.

"I consider that my duty as an attorney of this court and as attorney for my client requires that the truth and all of the truth should be known," said Mr. Epstein gently.

Mr. Mack took hold of this with a smile. "Peaches" was on the stand still under cross-examination at the time, and he asked for the original diary. She pointed to her husband on her attorney's table, and another red book took, somewhat similar to the one she displayed Tuesday was produced.

"Peaches" said she kept the diary until the day she was married, it said that she made record of the little episodes of her girlhood such as "neckings" with the flaming youth of her acquaintance. I believe they call it "necking" now, but when your correspondent was a "pecker" of no mean standing in the dim and misty past. They called it "hally-gassing." Times have changed. The girls didn't keep diaries then, they had "peckers."

Well, "Peaches" had set down the name of the "pecker" or the "neckers" as the case might be, so she said, but she had great respect for the boys she went out with, and she wanted to keep them out of the court record. The diary she had produced Tuesday was one she had written at the suggestion of a Jewish Mor. she said. Joseph is in the court record, anyway.

"Were the boys mentioned in the original diary, boys that you had made love to, and that had made love to you?" inquired John E. Mack.

Love at But Fifteen

"They were," said "Peaches." The world do move, my friends. Talk of "love" at fifteen and less. The world do move.

In her copy she had omitted all names. Some of the pages had been torn out of the original diary and Mr. Mack inquired about them. "Peaches" said there had been nothing on those pages. She admitted, as Mr. Mack read from her testimony Tuesday, that she had gibed about the diary. Her cheeks were as red as the blue of her hat as she confessed that she had written the diary in evidence, and Mr. Epstein objected on the ground that that pertained to events before "Peaches" marriage and therefore could have nothing to do with the present hearing.

"Your honor will find in the diaries, unless I am mistaken, that I am satisfied that I am not, the writings of the young girl to her husband, and she was a woman of the world, even though young," said Mr. Mack.

"They are extremely important as bearing upon her story that she was an innocent girl at the time of her marriage and saw nothing of the usual marriage relations."

"I was a good girl when I married," spoke up "Peaches" sharply.

"They are part of the two estates," Mr. Mack went on, paying no heed to her remark. "And with the letters which I intend to offer will give your honor a picture of the marriage of December and May and the life of the young couple in the marriage of the conviction that the story which the girl told on stand 'a' under all circumstances and all the evidence, including the diary, is true."

But Judge Seeger sided with Mr. Epstein, and would not admit the diaries. He said Mr. Mack might file briefs to support another similar motion.

At Cold Spring, Mrs. Mayer lives with Mrs. Heenan, and corroborated much of "Peaches'" tale with reference to the battling at Cold Spring.

Son-in-Law Glare

"Daddy" gave Mother Heenan a good, strong, son-in-law glare as she said:

"He always called me mother." She said "Peaches" was born in Columbus, Ohio, and admitted that she did, Heenan was divorced in 1918 from her husband.

"I do have to tell my age?" she asked, a bit nervously, as Mr. Mack examined the diary. "I am thirty-eight on this point. I am high confidence, which she identified, and which Mr. Mack examined carefully and then objected. The objection was not sustained.

Mrs. Heenan, too, told of Cold Spring. She said she had gone there and lived in a house on "Dad" dyer" instructions with money furnished by him, because "Daddy" attorney, Captain Dale, told her they wanted everything left in case of any action by the children's society, which was threatening steps against her as unfit guardian of "Peaches."

She said she noticed her daughter was unhappy at once, and heard "Peaches" and "Daddy" quarrel with great vim. She said she heard "Dad" say to his child wife:

"What are you, anyway? You run around with a house of low class fellows, and the first night I find out you, you met that Just what (Heenan was not specified, but your correspondent is well aware that most Richmans are Harry. However, I believe that in this particular case it was some unknown and obscure Richman, and not that big song-and-story man of the Revere's Palace."

She had a real old heart-to-heart.

FRANCIS C. DALE.

mother-in-law talk with "Daddy" with reference to his going on with her daughter and she says he told her:

"Daddy's" Invitation

"No judge would believe either of you. They buy me lunches while I freeze out the poor. The newspapers would keep me on the front pages, and she (Peaches) will be down in the dirt like the other Mrs. Browning."

Mrs. Heenan said she was with "Peaches" and "Daddy" at the battle of Cold Spring; the Fairfield and the Greenman hotels, but always at "Daddy's" invitation, where upon "Daddy's" countenance took on a very expressive one as if he had bitten into a lemon.

She said "Daddy" gave her daughter the name of "Peaches." Others always called her Frances. Under cross-examination by Mr. Mack, she told about "Daddy" coming home one night with his face very red, and said he produced a bottle from his pocket and said:

"Mother, I'm drunk."

Threatened Them

It was on this occasion, she said, that he threatened to shoot "Peaches" and her, but became very, very contrite when she threatened to call the police.

"He was that bottle" glared Mr. Mack. "You're a nurse and familiar with uncouth, how many cures would that bottle contain?"

"About two ounces," replied Mrs. Heenan, whereat Mr. Mack looked startled. A two-ounce bottle is not much of a bottle, when you are talking about liquor.

He mentioned to press the woman for more information about "Daddy's" condition, and finally she said, sassy:

"Mr. Mack, this is a very serious matter with 'Daddy' and I don't want to play with you."

"You can't play with me," said Mr. Mack, quickly. "I'm a married man."

Mr. Epstein gravely objected to this badinage, and Judge Seeger remarked:

"Well, different attorneys try their cases in different ways, and I'm not going to try to control their methods."

AFRAID OF WATER

For the first time since the trial began, Judge Seeger sought information on his own book from a witness. Mrs. Heenan had testified that "Peaches" some time went to a swimming pool with young friends and dived a bathing suit, but she didn't go in the water.

The court seemed to think this rather a curious circumstance, and Mrs. Heenan explained that she was afraid of an accident to "Peaches" if she went into the water.

A Bagful of Letters

"Peaches" was finally excused after she had identified a mass of letters shown her by Mr. Mack as her handwriting, and a number of copies of a newspaper containing the tale of her marital woes with the elderly "Daddy."

"Daddy" dug these letters and papers out of a huge black valise, of the "telescope" variety.

Both "Peaches" and "Daddy" seem to be disregarding this royal opportunity for sartorial display, as she had worn the same dress and hat since the trial started, and though "Daddy" is said to be the owner of 1,000 suits, he has worn the same one of a scrambled egg pattern from the beginning, and same suit.

"Peaches" said she got $18 per week in the auditing department in Federal before her marriage and at Tenth Textile High. Large round seams welled up in her eyes a couple of times, but she did not break down, though her mother, Mrs. Catherine Mayer, said right at her side ready to render first aid in case of collapse.

Even a case hardened old stinner such as your correspondent must feel a little sympathy for "Peaches" regardless of the merits of her case against "Daddy." He is no rose-scented any way you take him.

The middle-aged seems to be a victim of circumstance in many respects. She is disgraced for life, how, and why has not been made clear, but perhaps, as she says, it couldn't have happened if she had never met "Daddy," though she admits he didn't turn her.

She is marked for life spiritually, as well as physically, a tough break for a sixteen-year-old girl.

Shaped Like Apple

However, you look at it. The play is so far as she is concerned, that "Daddy" had more than two dollars. Otherwise, you would never have heard his name—or her name, for that matter.

Old friend mother-in-law was with one of the morning session in the person of Mrs. Heenan. You have seen her, my brethren. Full many a time and oft, yes, and of about the shape and heat of Willie Methan, the old time only poly of the many art of scrambling axes. Willie was shaped like an apple, she wore a black hat and dark blue dress, drawn a bit tightly and suitably about her hips. She smiled at her daughter as she sat down in the witness chair.

She followed to the stand one Mrs. Catherine Mayer, a woman of middle age, with a middle age bob who wore glasses, and a black satin dress, who told of quarrels between "Peaches" and "Daddy" while in the first bloom of their honeymoon.

SHE'LL TELL OF HER LIFE
WITH CHARLIE CHAPLIN

MILDRED HARRIS

"My Life With a Genius" is what Charlie Chaplin's first wife calls her intimate story of marriage with the film comedian. Mildred Harris will give to readers of the Boston Evening American facts about Charlie revealed for the first time. The former Mrs. Chaplin begins her story in Monday's Boston Evening American.

FIRST BRIDE OF CHAPLIN WILL CATCH DODGERS OF BARE LOVES AUTO TAX

Believing she knows Charlie Chaplin better than any other person, Mildred Harris, beautiful film star, first wife of the famous little comedian, has unlocked the storehouse of secrets hitherto untold and unusable.

She tears the cloak of silence from them in an absorbing serial of fact which begins next Monday in the Boston Evening American.

Her intriguing story is called "My Life With a Genius." Her "genius" is the diminutive screen star of the trick masculine, who has, huge boots and rubbery cane, now so greatly harassed by the charges of his present wife, Lita Grey Chaplin.

Nothing emanating from the realm of fiction has ever equalled in interest and timeliness this intimate story by Mildred Harris, a story rich in humor, pathos and incidents of a marital tragedy involving two screen players of world-wide fame.

Mildred Harris' decision to write this story for the Boston Evening American was momentous for her meant words threw light on one of the most celebrated real-life romances of the movies, on the colorful panorama behind the silver screen and on the past, present and future of Charlie Chaplin.

Movie fans, young and old, cannot afford to miss these true revelations told in an irresistible manner by the woman who knows both Chaplin and himself as well.

U. S. MAKING CHANGES IN TREATY WITH PANAMA

Washington, Jan. 27 (A.P.)—Proposed changes in the new treaty with Panama are under discussion between the American and Panamanian governments. The State Department insisted today that the revisions under consideration were of a minor character, not affecting the substance of the treaty. They would not change what children were at issue. The department has been advised by the action taken by the Congress in suggesting these revisions to clarify the situation.

Whistle Frozen to Cop's Tongue; Cow
Milk Turns Ice

It was 2 below zero today
when Traffic Officer John McCarthy put his nickel whistle in his mouth at Main Street and Beacon Street, Boston.

The whistle is still there—when the distressed officer started on a hurried search for some means of getting the whistle from his tongue, where it was frozen.

In fact, a dairyman
who has been out since 10 o'clock, when the temperature was 2 below zero, found that the milk in his pail was frozen solid.

people, making 5 a day or bet-

SENATOR WELLER of Maryland says President Coolidge will be nominated and elected in 1928 and carry the Democratic State of Maryland. Not all Maryland will agree with that.
It is assuming that the President is willing to take a 300-000 nomination (there is no third-term question). It is not easy to see how he can be beaten with the nation prosperous and wages high.

SHOULD PRESIDENT COOL-IDGE decide against a second nomination, Washington thinks the candidate would be Secretary Malloy or Secretary
Hovver.

There would be hard to beat.
Both understand the country's business, and until the big war shall have been thoroughly disrupted, business, including Mr.
Malloy's job of paying for the war, will be the thing.

OLD-FASHIONED TORIES criticize the Prince of Wales, who goes among working people, joining their social activities, war, religious, etc.
That is unworthy of royalty in Tory eyes.

The young Prince may have found time to read royal history and doesn't want to imitate Louis XVI, who wrote in his diary one word, "Nothing," on July 4, when the Bastille fell.
The Prince going to a working girl's dance may be doing more British royalty than all the Tories, with all their monodies.

WHEN ANDREW CARNEGIE
sold his mills to United States Steel he would accept only $100,000,000. He would take preferred stock as a gift, laughed at the common stock, saying it wasn't even water. It was "air."
Recent figures would surprise and probably annoy Mr. Carnegie. He sold the steel company in 1915 earned $199, 000,000, enough to pay $17,000 a day on the common stock, a new record of per-second property in the good business.

Don't sell this country short.

DREAMS OF "perpetual peace"
under the hovering wings of the League of Nations are pleasant. Cold facts are pleasant.

Jugoslavia, alarmed by Italy's progress in the Balkans and her close alliance with Hungary, prepares for war. A big army is part of the plan. All reserve officers are called for intensive training, and factories have begun feverish production of rifles, machine guns, and little Jugoslavia will build 100 fighting airplanes annually. Big, rich, sleepy Uncle Sam, take notion!

BOLSHEVIST government of the Ukraine, without Massachusetts fled to join the Cossacks after his ride on the wild horse, has scattered the monks of the oldest monastery in Russia.

Established at Kiev more than 1,500 years ago, the monastery showered monks and priests through good times and bad. The Ukrainian government drives out monks and priests, ordering them to engage in ordinary occupation.

Russia's effort to discourage human interest in religion, evidently not abandoned, will succeed no better than such efforts have succeeded in the past. Man is by nature religious.

TEST KILLS SON, UNTERMAYER BELIEVES

Hung Himself

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.)—Richard Starr Untermeyer, Yale student, died a victim of an experiment in hanging, in the opinion of his father, Louis Untermeyer, American poet and critic.

Mr. Untermeyer, who returned to his home with his son's body last night, said the only theory he could offer was that his son, led on by the curiosity of a lively mind, had experimented with the noose to test the sensations of strangulation and had been unable to rescue himself.
Untermeyer's body was found yesterday in his dormitory room in New Haven, Conn.

"Dick was not morbid," said Mr.
Untermeyer. "He was a healthy normal boy of twenty. He was in good standing in his studies and had no affairs with women. For me there is no other explanation of what actually took place."

The father would not believe that money or scholastic difficulties had caused his boy's action. Neither could the post see any connection between the death of his son and the outbreak of four other college youths who killed themselves. Various parts of the country recently to investigate the future.

"Dick was not morbid," said Mr.
Untermeyer. "He was a healthy
normal boy of twenty. He was in good standing in his studies and

IN YALE ROOMS
Richard Starr Untermeyer, found hanging lifeless on a bathrobe cord, is believed by his father, the New York poet, to have died while making an experiment.

STUDENTS WHO BARE GAY CAMPUS LIFE EXPELLED

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 27 (A.P.)
—The editor of the Vagabond, a subversive student publication of Indiana University, and the author of an article purporting to describe moral conditions on the campus, have been expelled from the university. While the article made no specific charges concerning students' morals, it was deemed by the faculty committee on student affairs to be indecent, and incompatible with the university's ideal of clean speech.

3 BOYS TESTIFY
AT WINTERS
TRIAL

Woodstock, Vt., Jan. 27.—Grant Kenyon, 14, and Donald Kettling, 15, both of Lowell, Mass., testified at the trial of John C. Winters charged with the murder of the Cecilia Gulliver of Windsor, that they discovered a cellar window with the glass intact, and in the dam in the millpond the day the girl's body was found and hid it in a tree.

The testimony was to show that the murder of Miss Gulliver carried the cellar window away with it and tossed it into the water. The government contended that the boys had seen the window and hid it in the tree. They said the glass was unbroken and they decided to put it up in the tree, where it remained until found.

An Amazing Love Story of a Misunderstood Hub Working Girl

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Gay Moore and Christine Noe, her cousin, are employed in the State Street house of Johnstone Baird, Gay as a typist and Christine as telephone operator. Christine is in love with Roger Pennington and Gay is in love with Stanley Baird, Johnstone Baird's son. Stan's family disown him when he marries Gay, but they happily start housekeeping in a tiny flat, with Stan working as automobile mechanic. Christine is discharged from her position for telling Peggy Baird, Stan's sister, that Penny is not in the office. She jealously imagines that Penny is in love with Peggy. Stan receives a proposition from Mr. Brooks, the father of Mini Brooks, whom Gay is sure is in love with Stanley. Stanley refuses the proposition to Gay's relief. Christine and Penny are married and leave for a European honeymoon. Christine is wild with delight when Penny takes her to the shops in Paris.

CHAPTER 28

Thus the first weeks of Summer went fleetly, happily for Gay; she somehow lost track of time and everything and everyone not directly concerned with herself. She forgot Johnstone Baird and his family, forgot Mini Brooks—and on another day remembered her forgetfulness with regret. Even Christine and Penny slipped into the back of her mind.

As when a note came in her cousin's hand she realized all at once that Christine must have returned weeks before. And she didn't let me know. That wasn't friendly, was it?—Still she, too, had been self-absorbed. She knew it now with a sense of shock. It was the very thing she had promised herself never to be.

The note was written from a fashionable apartment hotel in Brookline. The Penningtons were settled in for a long stay—Christine said. She invited Gay and Stan to spend the evening.

Gay's first thought after she and Stan had been admitted, was "How Christine has changed!" Something else there was—positively alien—about her. She had known all her life and who now seemed almost a stranger. Christine always had been beautiful; now she was stunning in her clinging black suit, dark hair more gleaming in the ultra boyish manner, her eyes and nose.

"You look exactly like a movie queen," Gay cried, beside herself.

Christine lifted one eye after another in a languid stare, looked beneath a cunningly shaded light, fanned her face into a smile, and then, as if she were a movie queen, she quickly, lightly, a match for her about person, slipped it behind her about person.

PIZZA SAYS N. E. WILL WIN BACK TEXTILE MILLS

New England moon will welcome back many of the textile industries that moved to the South. Charles Pies of the Chicago Link Belt Co. predicted today at the first of the Winter assembly luncheons of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

"Dress styles and other conditions which have contributed to depression in the textile industry have not changed," he said, "but New England has the advantage of skilled labor and experienced management."

The South has a temporary advantage in lower wages, which time will eradicate. And they in the South have some other temporary advantages, such as new mills, new equipment and new managements.

Boasting on "High Lights in Man ufacturing in the Chicago area," he predicted a prosperous year for 1927 in manufacturing, with but slight drop from the high mark of the year past.

URGENT "FAT ENVELOPES"

Declaring that "a fat pay envelope is, after all, the best incentive of discontent," he warned against the too broad practice of giving corporations to employees in industry.

THAT AFTERNOON I CALLED

on Charles at his office. I had decided not to say anything about Miller's trip to Canada. He was very cordial. I said, "I'm just in for a minute to ask you, 'one of us was right about the guilty party'?" He seemed to make the remark in my voice. He replied, in a slow, determined tone, "Doris, I still hold the same opinion concerning Dave, and I continue to believe that he is innocent even if I am never able to find the guilty man."

DIRECT PIPES, TICKERS GET BOYS' JOBS

A direct method of telephone reception, known as the "simplex system," for customers of a Western Union, which will gradually eliminate messenger and telephone reception, is being installed in Boston at locations where the volume of business is large.

The old-time messenger boy and his familiar uniform and the telephone wire continue to be used in Greater Boston householders, however, officials say.

They point out that there may be development some day by means of which a householder who is to receive a message may do so by means of "pushing" it, as he does on his radio.

The new apparatus, which has been installed by the Western Union in the office of Warren Redburn Manufacturing Company of Boston, the Stuart Company of Lynn and the Hoadley Company of Woburn, consists of a direct tape machine mounted on a small table and a "plug-in" wire for connection with the central office.

Messages are punctured in the office of the customer by a direct automatic method which any person, using a telephone, can handle with ease. The cost of the machine, which is borne by the telephone company, is about $1,500, according to C. C. Redburn, president of the Western Union.

The service will gradually be extended to small towns and communities which heretofore have been without telephone facilities. Mr. Crane points out that in time these will be crowded out on circuit, the different users "plugging in" for service to the central office, while others will be automatically looked out during the process.

What Doctors Say

There are dozens of so-called
 "doctors" in the drugstore, most of which the medical professionists laugh at. But there is one—Gude's Pepto-Mangan—that has been prescribed by physicians regularly for over 34 years.
 Your doctor will tell you why.
 If you ask him, He'll explain the tremendous tonic power of the special combination of organic iron and manganese. He'll tell you how quickly assimilable it is, acceptable to the most sensitive stomach. He'll tell you that before physicians prescribed it its prompt tonic action was demonstrated by hundreds of scientific tests.
 This is expert advice—the best advice you could get. Your doctor has Gude's Pepto-Mangan in both liquid and tablet form.

 fore the millions of listeners in the United States soon would not have a care in the world.

After months of tedious effort, they have whipped late shape, for final action, government control legislation, which in their opinion meets all the needs that have demanded since the Commerce Department introduced last Summer that it was without authority, under the provision act of 1912, to regulate the vast radio broadcasting machinery.
 Senate and House conferees on the bill, which will put the final word on the radio, have agreed upon the bill, which will be introduced in the House today.
 The bill, which would establish government control over all channels of interstate and foreign radio communication, represents the law of the national radio communication commission. In the law, the commission is authorized to make legislation as could be agreed upon at this time.

HAROLD AS CHAPERONE TO THE BOSSIES

NO COWBOY

In Harold Lloyd's new film, "The Kid Brother," the horn-rimmed comic tends to the lowing line, but not in the six shootin' manner of the regulation movie cowpuncher. The picture will be shown next week simultaneously at the Washington Street Olympia, the Scollay Square, the Fenway, Capitol and Central Square theatres.

6 DEAD, 20 HURT IN GAS BLAST

Turner, Ida, Jan. 27 (A.P.)—Six persons are dead and nearly a score injured, 13 seriously, as a result of an explosion of acetylene gas which wrecked a Mormon chapel and recreation hall here where a basketball game was in progress.

Shortly after play started the lighting system failed, and, witnesses said, someone lighted a match. A terrific explosion followed, wrecking the rear wall.

For a Smooth Skin is the gift of soap made the French way

The country that understands women—France!
 The women of every nation turning to Paris—buying loveliness from the wisdom of France.
 The whole world has looked to France for fine toilet soaps. For wise France knows that her incomparable cosmetics lose their magic unless the skin in itself is exquisite.
 Smooth, youthful skin! Cheeks and arms and gleaming shoulders, velvety, petal-like.
 For this France developed the famous French method by which Lux Toilet Soap is made.
 What promise in just its creamy smoothness! In this firm, fine-textured lasting cake! The caressing, instant lather (hard water on the Continent taught the French that secret) soothes and refreshes your skin, leaves it faintly fragrant, petal-like.
 Its every quality is French—the very things you loved in imported soap, recklessly paid you a dollar for as a "treat!"
 The bloom it gives your skin is French!
 With her genius for achievement America puts this savon de toilette within the reach of all the family. "Make us a soap as wonderful as fine French soap but much less costly," you told the world's largest soap makers. "Somehow—some way—it can be done."
 You were right! Lux Toilet Soap proves it. Generous, delicious, it is just ten cents! At last—a savon de toilette at a reasonable price. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

Instead of listening to arguments in opposition to your own opinion, you become loud and emphatic in your statements and about your own proofs that should be convincing!

It is not the evidence of stronger character and more confidence that you will allow yourself to be persuaded, no matter what the proofs are, you are presented!

It is not the more studied skill exhibited to the extent of learning the person of the least authority in malice and contempt to offend the most stubborn and set in opinion.

It is not the confidence and persons of their wrong ideas to be able to resist all opposition, because they will listen to reason not as they should themselves to consider a subject from any angle but that of personal preference.

Certainly you should not be as self-righteous and weak that you can be changed about the will of anyone who "talks convincingly, but are narrow-minded and self-righteous" and that they are not as they are not about your mind to another's opinion.

Are you living in a world of thought of your own making and are living alone in a thinking world?

MEDBURY SAYS—

by JOHN F. MEDBURY
 ACCORDING to criminologist reports, there are so many crooks in this country that a man isn't even safe in jail any more.
 THE straight and narrow path is beginning to look like a detour.
 THIS ope caught a fellow the other day who was so crooked that he made a pretzel look like a ring pole.
 HIS pal was killed last week, and while he was lying in the funeral parlor he picked the undertaker's pocket.
 HE said they could bury him in any vault they wanted and he wouldn't need the combination.
 HE was so crooked he even forged the name on the tombstone.
 IF he ever want to lighten the angels would have to look up their harp.
 HE wouldn't be there an hour before he had paws the Golden State.
 HE was so tough he had to use an assumed name to get into State Prison.
 PRISONS have to be careful when they admit novads.
 AT Joliet you have to have references.
 THE Detroit police department took out burglar insurance on their patrol wagon last week.
 ONE fellow stole all the door knobs out of city hall and was selling them for oranges.
 IT wasn't discovered until the Lord's alms clerk of commerce complained that their fruit was just a bad name body else.
 THE door knobs weren't so juicy as they should have been.
 A New York confidence man sold Grant's tomb to a man the other day, and the fellow who bought it tried to serve the occult pants with a dispositive notice.
 THIS confidence man asked him $250 for it, but he was so fool he gave them a thousand dollar bill so that if everything wasn't all right he could have them arrested when they brought back his change. (Copyright 1931 by John F. Medbury, Inc.)

 FOR Golds BAYER ASPIRIN

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE—BY HELEN ROWLAND

THE trouble with most of these modern marriages is that they begin to ferment and go sour before they have had time to "bottle".

Man will never content woman's right to change her mind so long as she will leave him the sole and exclusive right to an occasional change of heart.

A glimmering star in a woman's eye may touch a man's heart, but when he finds himself deluged with a continuous shower of weeps he wishes he had a rain-check.

Success in marriage, as in any other profession, requires a certain amount of stick-to-itiveness; you can get so used to anything, from wet to a husband, if you let it seep into you long enough, that you wouldn't know what to do without it.

Every now and then a man thinks that he has to do something desperate or brutal to prove to a woman that he is all his own.

A man may feel just as much emotion for a woman after a few years of marriage as he did during courtship, but most of them develop an astonishing amount of strength in controlling any expression of it.

When marriage was "trial" a wife stood for a period in a man's life; but now, she is more apt to be just a companion, a dash, a semi-color, or a question mark.

Don't waste your tears on the woman a man should have married and didn't save them for the one he shouldn't have married and DID.

Calling the Pigs Home

Pictures Speak Louder Than Words

Here are three pictures published in the Chicago Herald and Examiner. If you didn't see them THERE, see them HERE.

They tell their own story and prove what has often been said here: That one picture can be worth a thousand words. The moral of the pictures is this:

It is, alas! only too true, the caller of the "blind" pigs is the most successful "hog-caller" in the world.

AT A RECENT FARMERS' CONVENTION IN THE SOUTHWEST A FARMER WON THE HOG-CALLING CONTEST BY HAILING THE PORKERS AT A DISTANCE OF A MILE AND A HALF.

LADY AT THE CONVENTION TOOK EXCEPTION TO HIS NAUGHTY TONES AS WELL AS HIS PRONUNCIATION AND PROCEEDED TO LURE THE PIGS WITH DULCET CADENCES FROM A DISTANCE OF THREE MILES.

AS A MATTER OF RECORD, THEY ARE BOTH AMATEURS. THIS FELLOW HAS BEEN CALLING PIGS—BLIND ONES AT THAT—FROM ALL POINTS OF THE COUNTRY AND PARTS OF CANADA AND EUROPE.

Why Trifle With It?

American Sovereignty in Philippines Called by President Coolidge "a Sacred Trustship"

You can expect nothing but increasing discontent among the one million non-Christian inhabitants of the Philippines until Congress restores to the Governor-General the authority that he once had to appoint and remove governors of the non-Christian provinces.

Control of the islands of Mindanao and Sulu, where most of the Mohammedan Moros live, and of other non-Christian areas was taken out of the hands of the Governor-General ten years ago and subordinated to the consent of the Philippine Senate. Today this control is exercised by the oligarchy of politicians at Manila that holds the legislative branch of the Government in its grip.

Most of the irritation and general discontent in non-Christian provinces today can be traced directly to the supplanting of American officials with Filipinos during the administration of Governor-General Wood's predecessor.

Between the Filipinos and the Moros in particular there is a deep-rooted animosity. They are opposites in many vital respects.

By tradition, custom, religion, racial temperament, racial and tribal aspirations and habits of thought the Moros of the "Southern Islands" differ radically from the Christian Filipinos of the islands of Luzon and the Visayas.

Give the Moros provincial governors responsible directly to the American Governor-General at Manila. Give them a Moro constabulary with American officers. Give them judges who will administer justice impartially. This is what they ask. Give it to them and there will again be among them "general content."

And what is true of the Mohammedans is, to a large extent, also true of the other half-million non-Christians in the Philippines.

Of course, the Moro problem is a part of the Philippine problem. But it is a separate part. It should be treated separately by the Government at Washington.

It is not necessary to "cut off" the islands of Mindanao and Sulu and Palawan from the rest of the Philippines.

All that is necessary for Congress to do now for the non-Christian peoples of the Philippines is to give back to the representative of American sovereignty at Manila the same power to protect them that he once had and that he ought to have again.

American sovereignty over the Philippines was defined by President Coolidge the other day as "a sacred trustship." Surely the non-Christians, as one million of the Philippine people, are one of the obligations of that trustship.

To leave the non-Christians of the Philippines any longer under the tyranny of a Filipino oligarchy is to trifle with "a sacred trustship."

'MOM' AND 'POP' NOT UNDIGNIFIED

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A CORRESPONDENT wants something done about "pop" and "mom." He writes: "A dignity and sacredness seem to attend the very words 'mother' and 'father' coming from the lips of the child taught to use them, and are unfeeling and unknown where inane expressions such as 'pop' and 'mom' are used."

Some sort of a law or organization or crusade ought to be started, he thinks, and I ought to start it. But I won't. I gently but firmly decline.

I read the newspaper story of the girl swimmer who conquered the wind and rain and shifting currents of the English Channel.

It is a story of pluck and determination triumphant, but it is more than that.

It is the story of the influence of a girl's admiration and love for her mother.

On the side of the boat which accompanied her she had the words written, "Think of Mother," and when she had triumphed she said to reporters, "She really did it."

When her trainer advised her to give up the attempt as a storm broke and the waves rose near the English coast, she is quoted in one cablegram as saying:

"No, no, I am doing this for mom."

That sort of knocked the props out of a crusade against the word "mom."

It was, there, anything but an inane expression.

Few examples of greater respect and affection have been seen in recent years.

So I don't warm up greatly to the proffered role of being forth-coming Coeur de Lion in this new crusade.

For, after all, the important thing about a word is its connotation.

The name is never so important as what is signified by it. "Mom" with a connotation of affection wins hands down over "Mother" with an accompaniment of cold estrangement.

The attitude is always significant rather than the expression.

BOSTON DAY-B-DAY

By ELISIE ROBINSON

It's football becoming one of the major pleasures of the man's nation?

Roger Babson thinks it is. Babson Babson is one of our big-time names in economics. It is his business to judge value—material value, material value. Recently he has been giving his American colleagues a most amusing and serious lecture on the value of football.

He declares that, judged by the returns on the investment, our college athletes are colossal failures. Much of this failure he blames on college athletics. "Big business athletics are a menace," he declares, "both because of the false ideas they create and because they tend to limit participation in sport to a few."

That Thanksgiving game you enjoyed so much last year—Roger Babson thinks the whole nation is having a little price for that game. Last year.

Approval of college sport, he says, "but I am opposed to making it a sort of sport or in making sport for a few. The only legitimate reason for sport is to encourage sport. A generation back the whole college played sports. Then we began to specialize in sport. We began to concentrate on winning, on making huge sums of money, on making huge sums of money."

Friends of MISS HELEN REILLY, secretary to MAYOR NICHOLS, will be glad to know she is on her way to complete recovery following a serious operation at the Boston Hospital. Miss Reilly is a school teacher and a school teacher.
